We cannot recollect of ever finding ourselves in the presence of a baby, but what the fond mother would say to it, "Now be a good little deary and give gentleman a nice sweet kiss." Of course we accepted it, naturally modest and don't care to be seen kissing anybody. We don't hank seen kissing anybody. are willing to kiss a pretty girl occa- writing. her own rather than have any trouble, yet we think it said pretty girl owed us n kiss, we should much prefer to have it when it became due; we never should present our bill and demand paymentnot if we continued perfectly sane. We understand that there are quite a numgard to kissing; if so let them kiss, we cannot stop to argue the point, our subect treats of babies.

The monotony of babies' lives is varied by such little incidents as an attack of the measles, mumps, or croup, and we and also the flower of the family. would not neglect to speak of cutting teeth. A baby that has got through all these infantile troubles, is considered worth some seventy-five dollars more than one who has them in prospect. The diseases are, however, easily treated, and in case of the measles, all that is necessary is to have them "break out" well, and to see to it that they don't 'strike in." With the mumps, just let them "mump" round a day or two, and they will come out all right. With the eroup it is necessary to "strike ile," without much trouble, Cutting teeth runs longer than either of the diseases, yet by a timely investment of a rubber ring and rattle, you getrid of a doctor's bill. When we were young, we cut our teeth on a silver dollar, but as dollars are now made of paper, they won't stand the wear and tear of a whole set of teeth, and 'tis cheaper in the end to invest in the rubber ring. Learning to walk and talk are two achievements about which two much cannot be said. The walking, though, is a mere nothing copared to talking yet it is more dangerous, and accidents olten occur; still they usually acquire the art with the necessary breaking of some crockery or furniture, which they frantically clutch at in order to save a fall. During the season of practicing nothing can drop in the house, or the least noise be made, but the mother will drop what ever she has in her hands and cry out ; "Their goes Willie; what has he done now !" and rushes to the scene of action to find perhaps a flower pot on the floor, and Willie engaged in scattering its contente about the room. After clearing up the debris, the mother returns to her work, thanking her stars was ruined, and not Willie's neck,

NATURAL HISTORY OF BABIES | worth five dollars to either of the delighted parents. Talking baby protest against Grant's election. perfection, though by constant practice the most stupid can partially acquire it, yet it takes two or three generations of babies to make a perfect linguist. The effect a baby produces on a family, no matter how sober said family may e, is wonderful to behold. It completely turns the heads of all. If a particular one behave more insane or is carried more away than the rest, we think grandma will bear off the palm, al though, ps, ma, grandps, aunt, and a long list of cousins are not counted out by any means. We think the mother acts the most sensible, though even she has her failings and weak points in regard to the baby, and will occasionally exhibit a trace of insanity when dilat-

ing on his charms and accomplishments. The effect babies have on progression is self-evident. No one ever new of a baby inferior to any other preceding baby. On the contrary, each one is a little in advance of any yet born; and when we think of the vast number yet to be, and how every one will be a triffe one thousand persons. superior to its predecessor, what a glorions future awaits us! It must be comforting to a man, no matter how ugly or how despised he may be, to think that he was once a baby, beloved by a large circle of relatives and remain on interest than to have it paid riends. It is a comfort we would not deny him.
